Al Jazeera - St. Louis landfill fire could reach radioactive waste in months - 9/18/15 - State-commissioned reports support residents' fears about proximity of smoldering fire to Manhattan Project waste. As reported in part three of Al Jazeera's May series looking at the effects of the Manhattan Project on St. Louis and its suburbs, the extent of the contamination, in terms of severity and location, at the landfill remains largely unknown, but researchers have concluded that it is likely far worse than previously thought. <http://america.aljazeera.com/articles/2015/9/18/missouri-st-louis-landfill-fire-could-reach-radioactive-waste-in-months.html>

St. Louis Public Radio - State Sen. Chappelle-Nadal resigns from U. City school board to focus on Bridgeton landfills (audio-18:07) - 9/17/15 - Thursday's "St. Louis on the Air," state Sen. Maria Chappelle-Nadal, D-University City, announced her resignation as a member of the University City School Board. She said she was doing so to focus on issues surrounding radioactive contamination in the region, specifically naming the Bridgeton and West Lake landfills, as well as near Coldwater Creek. <http://news.stlpublicradio.org/post/state-sen-chappelle-nadal-resigns-u-city-school-board-focus-bridgeton-landfills>

KMOX Radio St. Louis - Missouri Senator Leaves Job to Focus on Bridgeton Landfill - 9/18/15 - While some Earth City residents and businesses are moving away from the Bridgeton Landfill, one Missouri Senator has quit her job to work closer to radioactive waste. Maria Chapelle-Nadal has "caught fire" on the issue and quit her post on the University City school board and says this issue needs more than just letters. <http://stlouis.cbslocal.com/2015/09/18/missouri-senator-leaves-job-to-focus-on-bridgeton-landfill/>

St. Louis Post-Dispatch - Chappelle-Nadal says she will resign from U. City School Board - 9/17/15 - Maria Chappelle-Nadal, the Missouri state senator who also serves as a director on the University City School Board, said Thursday that she will resign from her role in the district. Chappelle-Nadal made the announcement on St. Louis Public Radio while a guest on "St. Louis on the Air." As of Sept. 30, she said she will no longer sit on the School Board and instead focus on the issue of radioactive waste in the West Lake Landfill. http://www.stltoday.com/news/local/education/maria-chappelle-nadal-says-she-will-resign-from-u-city/article_74158fce-8f93-506f-aee1-8cdd0321979f.html
